Campus

Grants available:

The BGSU Alumni Association and the Parents' Club will provide up to $500 to support student research and creative projects. Undergraduate students with a GPA of 3.0 or better who have at least 30 credit hours and study the arts, humanities or sciences are eligible. Applications are available in the Research Services Office at 120 McFall Center. For information call 372-2481.

State

Silly rabbit:

OXFORD, Ohio — Female students at Miami University said they would pick Monday night's speech by Playboy Enterprises Inc. executive, Christie Hefner.

They were irked that the university's lecture committee arranged to bring Ms. Hefner to campus for an $8,000 speech at the Shriver Center. They said Playboy magazine degrades women.

Undies festival set:

PIQUA, Ohio — Phyllis Diller, Bob Hope and Whoopi Goldberg are doing their part to help make what may be the world's longest clothesline full of underwear. Other notables have also sent autographed underwear to the organizers of the Great Outdoor Underwear Festival.

The event, Oct. 11-13, heralds Piqua's heritage as home to 14 underwear manufacturers over the years.

Nation

Exxon pleads guilty:

ANCHORAGE, Alaska — The state and federal governments announced Monday a new $1 billion deal with Exxon Corp. to settle government litigation over the nation's worst oil spill.

Under the agreement, which must be approved by a federal judge in Anchorage, Exxon and its shipping subsidiary agreed to plead guilty to four misdemeanors. Two federal felony pollution charges will be dropped.

Nominee endorses Tinker campaign

by Jill Novak
editor

Bowling Green mayoral candidate Jim Tinker recently announced that he has support from literally across the United States — and from a Democratic nominee for the presidency, at that.

Former mayor of Irvine, California and one seeker of the Democratic nomination for U.S. President, Larry Agran said last week he would endorse Tinker for mayor.

Agran was alerted to Tinker's candidacy by Larry Friedman, professor of history at the University and Agran's brother-in-law.

His platform calls for the "New American Security," a plan that will cut military spending by $150 million and bring more domestic resources back to the United States.

In a telephone interview Monday, Agran said he decided to lend his support to Tinker because they share many of the same views on issues.

"[Tinker's campaign] is based on my own experience in a local town where we faced the same kind of issues. Affordable housing and community unity were precisely some of the issues faced in Irvine," Agran said.

"Tinker is very much on the right track for his campaign," he added.

Agran said he believes "people in their 20s" are capable of lead-

Fraternity 'pushes' for disabled

by Tracey Gidich
contributing reporter

Students walking by the Union this week may notice members of the Pi Kappa Phi fraternity walking circles around the Oval, giving a "push" for the handicapped.

People Understanding the Severely Handicapped, or PUSH is the weeklong national philanthropic fundraiser sponsored by Pi Kappa Phi.

The PUSH Foundation provides funding for the facilities serving severely mentally and physically handicapped children.

The first event of the weeklong fundraiser is the 100-Hour PUSH-a-thon. The members of Pi Kappa Phi fraternity will "push" a wheelchair around the Union Oval for 100 hours straight in a public and symbolic gesture," said PUSH chairperson Brad Snedeker.

The PUSH-a-thon began Monday morning at 8 and will continue until midnight Friday.

The PUSH Foundation was founded in 1977 by Pi Kappa Phi and generated $348,000 nationally for 1990-91.

The money goes specifically to fund play units, a new concept in the education of these children.

The goal of this year's PUSH campaign is to raise $5,000, which will be donated to The Ann Grady Center in Holland, The Sunshine Children's Home in Maumee and Woodlane Industries in Bowling Green.

According to Snedeker, "Over the last five years PUSH has raised more money than any other Greek philanthropic fundraiser." Locally, PUSH has raised more than $50,000.

The Pi Kappa Phi fraternity brothers take semester trips to Ann Grady to see what needs to be done and to see how the children live, Snedeker said.

Because participation in PUSH week is voluntary, it is important for the members of Pi Kappa Phi to work together.

"In seeing their brother give, they want to give too," Snedeker said. "They work together to better society."

"The Greek system as a whole supports the effort," Snedeker said. The motivation fraternities and sororities provide during the 100-hour PUSH-a-thon keeps the morale up of those who are pushing the empty wheel chair.

Mayor Edwin Miller is expected to make a proclamation for a city-wide PUSH week to be observed.

Peace Corps seeks quality people

Organization's changed format offers greater challenge to volunteers

by Kimberly Larson
general assignment reporter

The Peace Corps used to commonly be thought of as a "hippie haven" where flower children joined to promote peace throughout the world.

Times have changed since then, and along with it, so has the image of the Peace Corps.

The Peace Corps has been in existence since 1961, when President John F. Kennedy created the organization to promote multiculturalism and to share necessary skills with developing nations of the world.

According to Dan Gilbert, director of public affairs for the Michigan/Ohio office of the Peace Corps, fresh-from-college adults initially formed the nucleus of the organization.

"In the first 10 or 15 years the majority of Peace Corps volunteers were newly graduated people with degrees in liberal arts," he said.

However, the Peace Corps had to change because countries which asked for help began to become more specific with what they actually needed from the Peace Corps.

"Today, it seems that the emphasis is more on mathematics, science, business, small business development and agricultural skills," Gilbert said.

Due to this change, the Peace Corps has become more challenging for the participants.

"The Peace Corps is sometimes thought of as the French Foreign Legion where you just volunteer and head off into the world," Gilbert said. "The Peace Corps has a much more arduous application process."

The application itself is 13 pages long, he said.

In addition to filling out applications, volunteers must be interviewed to see if they are cut out for this type of work.

"In the interview, we are looking for someone with a personality that seems to be able to survive and thrive in an environment totally different from what they are used to," Gilbert said.

The Peace Corps is currently looking for individuals who possess a certain skill.

"Eighty percent of all volunteers currently in the Peace Corps have a four-year college degree," Gilbert said. "The other 20 percent have significant work experience in a field such as construction, agriculture and masonry."

The Peace Corps wants volunteers who have an "altruistic nature" and who want to help better people's lives.

Ethnic plan gets mixed reactions

by Chris Hawley
general assignment reporter

As the semester nears the halfway point, students and teachers are voicing mixed reactions to the ethnic studies classes now mandatory under the University's new cultural diversity requirement.

Some students are questioning whether the new cultural diversity requirement can be effective or if such courses should be required at all, while some faculty see the requirement as only a "band-aid" to hide more serious curricular deficiencies.

The requirement is the result of a five-year project to introduce minority topics to the University curriculum. Starting this year, all new students are required to take at least one of 22 Board of Trustees-approved ethnic studies courses offered in all of the University's seven colleges.

All of the courses existed before being approved to fill the cultural diversity requirement. Department heads say they expect an increase in the size and number of classes needed to accommodate requirement students, but because the offered courses are divided among all colleges, administrators say it is difficult to predict how each department will be affected.

Ethnic Studies Chairperson Robert Perry said most students will take their cultural diversity course in their first or second year. If so, in two years about one-eighth of University students would be enrolled in the courses each semester.

Teachers say the course curricula will not change de-

Alaska's ecology sold to Exxon for a pittance

Exxon won. Monday, the state of Alaska and the federal government approved a $1.1 billion settlement of government litigation over the largest oil spill in the history of the United States.

This new settlement has Exxon paying only $25 million more than it was supposed to under the deal that fell apart last March, when a federal judge rejected Exxon's criminal plea-bargaining and the Alaska state legislature voted down the entire agreement.

Exxon has agreed to a $150 million criminal fine, but with $125 million of it suspended "in recognition of the company's voluntary expenditures" for the cleanup. It also agreed to pay $100 million in restitution for the spill.

Unchanged from the previous settlement, Exxon will pay an additional $900 million over the next 10 years to settle civil damage claims from both Alaska and the United States government.

To all observers, this would seem to be justice — a corporation paying more than $1 billion for the mistakes it made. The environment will be cleaned and those injured will get their restitution.

However, scratch beneath the surface and the dirt of the deal comes bubbling up like the millions of barrels of crude staining Alaska's coast.

Alaska Governor Walter Hickel has indicated he does not plan to refer the agreement to Alaska's state legislature. According to Hickel, he has the authority himself to approve the settlement and referred the previous deal to the legislature only out of courtesy to state lawmakers.

Hickel is a known friend of oil development in his state, supporting such deals as opening federally-protected areas to oil development. When the state legislature defeated the deal last spring, it was largely because it was seen as a slap on the wrist to Exxon. Hickel then protested the move by the legislature.

Meanwhile, estimates put the damage wrought by the spill in the tens of billions, and the facts of the deal add up like clues in a murder mystery.

Some in the business community will herald this as proof businesses are punished the same as standard criminals when either break the law. Others will undoubtedly protest the situation, saying the fine is far too high for a business that tried (rather belatedly) to contain and clean the spill.

However, the truth of the matter is Exxon is getting another slap on the wrist. It makes hundreds of millions in profits every quarter. The ecology of Alaska's coastline may never recover from the damage Exxon's actions caused. So why are Hickel and the federal government OK'ing this deal?

Alaska's unofficial motto is "The Last Frontier." It is known for its rugged outdoor environment and millions of acres of protected national parks. It is a land of unequaled natural beauty. And it is now the latest victim to a corporation's greed and politician's willingness to sell out tomorrow for the profit margins of today.

All concerned should reject alcohol proposal

A plan to stick it to the students is unfortunately gaining momentum in the halls of justice in Bowling Green.

Mike Marsden, permanent resident, introduced his idea before the September meeting of the mayor's city/university/student relations committee. His proposition? - Force students arrested for alcohol violations citywide to receive mandatory substance abuse counseling.

Our 20-year-old student body president apparently continues to endorse Marsden's plan, which will be presented to Municipal Judge James Bachman today.

If Bachman approves the idea, everyone arrested for alcohol violations in Bowling Green will, in addition to a several hundred dollar fine, be required to complete some sort of substance abuse education program. It appears certain that convicts will be stuck paying the bill for counseling services which, in most cases, they don't need.

Students make up most of the alcohol arrests in this city, and a large percentage of these arrests are related to the drinking age. So why are Marsden and Sears endorsing this plan? Why create or endorse a plan that not only creates more hassle than it is worth, but also creates more bad will between students and the city?

Our advice to players in this issue:

Judge Bachman: Please try to realize how badly the 21-year-old drinking age has already affected the city of Bowling Green. Mandating an expensive, time-consuming counseling program will have little added enforcement value, and this information is already available on a voluntary basis in the Prevention Center. Besides, most students arrested for alcohol arrests are not alcoholics. They are merely unlucky.

Sears: Please openly withdraw your support for this plan. Explain to Bachman why you are doing so. You may lose a little face, but anything less is hypocritical.

Marsden: Your statement of equity sounds nice in a vague sort of way, but penalties for the "crime" of consuming beer are obviously too harsh already, both on and off campus.

There are problems caused by alcohol consumption in this city. The police blotter illustrates this nicely. But prohibition Bowling Green-style is not going to improve the lot of anyone.

BG GOP winning partisan war

College Dems need unity, Tinker to win mayoral race

"The College Democrats are kicking ass and taking names, so to speak."

— Scott Geringer, in one of his thoughtful and long-missed analyses of the local political scene.

My, how things have changed.

Last fall, the College Democrats looked unstoppable as they creamed the College Republicans and won the campus vote for gubernatorial candidate Anthony Celebrezze and Wood County Commissioner incumbent Thomas Warns.

But now the tables have turned, and it is the CRs who appear united as the CDs approach their endorsement meeting tonight, torn between independent candidate Jim Tinker and Joyce Kepke, the Democrat candidate.

Republican wonderboy Dwayne Sattler has run a flawless campaign for the hearts and minds of the campus electorate on behalf of Republican Ward 1 candidate Scott Ziance.

And, surprisingly, the CRs have united behind Wes Hoffman, Bowling Green's elderly statesman of city government and Republican choice for mayor.

Through CR genius, Hoffman is making inroads on campus with a platform including hiring a city ombudsman, sensitivity training for all police officers and support for the greek village.

In comparison, the College Democrats appear divided as they plan their endorsements tonight.

The CD leadership, including Damian Billak, appears to be doing everything they can to swing their group toward endorsing the Democratic ticket. But a sizable contingent appears ready to support senior journalism major Jim Tinker, an independent candidate for mayor and obvious emotional favorite.

The CD Democrat loyalists are in a real bind. Kepke, a lackluster choice, has made little effort to appeal to student concerns on her own and refuses to take a position on the greek village concept.

J.C. KOHLSTRAND

And, as long as her literature is required to contain names like Dick Newlove (consistently booed at all graduation ceremonies), it may be impossible to sell her to students.

Tinker's support for the greek village and a citizens' review board for the city's police division will make the CDs look ludicrous if they decide to endorse Kepke.

Despite this pressure to endorse Tinker, CD-party loyalists could have persevered. But Tinker's final blow may have landed — from Irvine, Calif., of all places.

Larry Agran, candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, recently announced his support for the Tinker campaign. Agran speaks as an expert of sorts on college towns — he was three-time mayor of the conservative home to the University of California.

More importantly for Tinker's CD supporters, it will be hard to characterize him as beyond the realm of the goals of the Democratic Party while he carries an endorsement from someone who could conceivably become their candidate for president. In contrast, Kepke's endorsements mainly come from Bowling Green's landed gentry.

If Tinker has any hope of defeating the apparent CR challenge, his team needs to separate him from Hoffman as the true candidate for student interests.

Tinker needs to maintain the image of a candidate who can win and he must publicize pro-student stances stronger than either of his opponents are willing to take. Pledging to support equitable representation in city boards and commissions, including a citizen's review board, may be one such tactic.

The CRs appear much more unified and vigorous than the CDs. But in this strange, anything-goes election year, student unity on the Republican side could spell disaster for one important student candidate.

John Kohlstrand is managing editor of The BG News and a senior journalism major originally from Brownstown, Mich. He covered city council for two years as a reporter and city editor of The News.

Letters to the Editor

School spirit not giving up the ghost

The BG News:

I too, like Jay Murdock, attended the Bowling Green football game on Saturday (The BG News, Sept. 25) and I have something to say to him: You were in the wrong section, Jay! I, along with other BG football fans, cheered for the Falcons throughout the game. We yelled for the offense and the defense. Not only when the offense scored or when the defense held Cincinnati from a touchdown. The entire game.

The title of the column was "Football crowds lack spirit." I'm sorry, Jay, but spirit isn't seeing people you haven't seen since Thursday, laughing, crying, forming new friendships and destroying others. Unlike your trips to football games, I DO care who wins when I go to a BG football game, and I DO go to see the team play, not to see the band, as you suggested. (Nothing taken away from the band, they are great.)

You also mentioned a counterargument of "If the football team was any good..." Well, maybe you need a wider lens or just plain need to come out from behind your camera and take a look at the great job the Falcons are doing. Contrary to what you guessed, I don't believe the Falcons will lose the next six or seven games. Maybe YOU need a lesson in spirit.

True, SOME fans at BG need to let the team know they're behind them. But please don't generalize and insult those of us that DO go to games, DO care who wins, and DO believe in the Bowling Green football team!

Clough and Troup need four-way stop

Open letter to the City of Bowling Green Traffic Commission:

This letter is intended to bring attention to the recent change of stop signs at the intersection of Clough and Troup streets. The intersection was previously a two-way stop with the signs on Troup Street. This past summer, the city made the decision to change to a two-way stop with the signs on Clough Street.

The problem is the confusion among drivers, bikers and pedestrians on each of these roads. Both full-time residents and returning students are often unaware or inattentive to this recent reversal of stop signs. The result has been numerous near-collisions by drivers and bikers who fail to stop coming from any direction.

The city should immediately rectify this situation by making the intersection of Clough and Troup streets into a four-way stop. Minimal time and effort would be needed to emplace two more stop signs at this intersection. Please act before the occurrence of a major injury or death.

Group stresses understanding

Friends of the Deaf promotes communication among students

by Michael Zawacki
contributing reporter

One problem faced by the hearing impaired is communication. Often, understanding or getting a message across can be a difficult task.

A University group organized for students who would like to learn more about the deaf community, ironically, faces a similar problem.

"The biggest myth about Friends of the Deaf is that you have to be a special education major and in the hearing impaired program to belong, but you don't. Everyone's welcome," Friends of the Deaf President Denise Davila said.

Friends of the Deaf is a campus organization that was started at the University in fall 1986 by then-students Lori Schultz and Annette Sicora.

They wanted to establish an organization for those entering careers in deaf education as well as those who simply have a career in the deaf community.

Today, the group is open to all majors.

"Communication is an important skill to have, right?" said sophomore German and Spanish major and club member Jeff Helt. "In order to be a civilized person, it's important to be able

—Friends of the Deaf President Denise Davila, to communicate to the most people possible through the most means possible."

"Attendance has really grown this year because of a rising interest in learning sign language and because of a lot of publicity in The BG News," notes on classroom chalkboards and fliers all helped to reach those students who would be interested in the group," Davila said.

Group activities are centered around what members want to learn—usually sign language.

Group members spend time learning how to sign along with songs such as the Escape Club's "I'll Be There," using both Signed Exact English and American Sign Language. These two forms differ because Sign Exact English uses the structure of the English language to form sentences, while American Sign Language does not. American Sign is the most common form used in the deaf community.

A variety of other social and educational activities are on the group's agenda.

A "silent pizza" will be planned for Myles' Pizza Pub. Davila said people who do not really know sign get a lot out of the silent pizza because other than in ordering the pizza everyone uses sign language to communicate.

The group is also going to watch programs that deal with the deaf community such as the Hallmark Hall of Fame movie "Bridge to Silence," "Children of a Lesser God," and this season's new television series "Reasonable Doubts" with Mark Harmon and deaf actress Marlee Matlin.

The group plans to invite a deaf speaker to come to a meeting for a question and answer session so members can get firsthand experience on the deaf culture and the deaf community.

Two fund raisers are planned for the 1991-92 school year. Fall semester the group would like to sell bags designed by members and in spring the group is planning to sell T-shirts.

Members of the club have the advantage of being able to talk to older members in the group and question them about scheduling, teachers, and which direction to go with a special education major as well as where to go for a good sign tutor.

Lectures and workshops at the Ohio School of the Deaf in Columbus and college for the deaf Gallaudet University in Washington D.C. are made available to the group's members who would like to attend.

Davila said Friends of the Deaf meetings help to reinforce what people learn in the classroom because members get to use sign learned in class in a more social environment.

"I've always wanted to do [sign] and it's very interesting and it makes sense now," said freshman business major Molly Costello.

Friends of the Deaf meets every Monday at 9 p.m. in room 404 of the Education Building.

Contest to focus on 'stressful' art

by Jason Aslinger business reporter

Whoever says stress is a bad thing obviously never won $200 because of it.

The Department of Psychology, along with the Job Descriptive Index research group, has organized this week's stress contest.

The challenge is to create drawings which illustrate how it feels when participants are stressed out. These drawings can be pictures or representations of anything.

Also, the drawings must depict stress in general. Participants cannot concentrate on just work stress or stress from relationships.

Finally, the drawings must be in a series representing the levels of "no stress" to "extreme stress." The goal is to create a five-level stress continuum.

The contest rules include: ● Drawings must represent a continuum of stress;

● Drawings must have at least five levels of stress, spaced equally apart;

● Drawings must not consist of words;

● Drawings must not portray stressful situations, but rather stress as participants experience or feel it;

● Drawings must not refer to gender, race, age, or ethnic origin;

● Drawings must be in black and white;

● Anyone is eligible to enter.

"You don't have to be a great artist to win," said graduate student Michelle Haff. "We are looking for good ideas that represent the stress continuum."

A panel of judges will determine the winner by Oct. 31. First prize will be $200, second prize is $75 and third prize is $25.

All entries must be submitted on an unlined 8.5 inch by 5 inch index card or a half sheet of 8.5 inch by 11 inch paper. All entries should be put in a manila envelope and mailed by Oct. 4 to Patricia Smith at the Psychology Department.

ing communities.

"I think young people can be effective in government. We should encourage this 'new leadership,'" he said.

Tinker agreed, adding, "Agran is right. Young people are capable of making things happen."

Tinker said he is excited to have support from a national figure.

"I think we have a very legitimate campaign that is going to win, and the fact that it's acknowledged by Agran reaffirms the goals we are trying to achieve," he said.

Stressing Agran's endorsement is not from one Democrat to another, Tinker explained instead the endorsement is "from one former mayor to one student running for mayor."

Agran's campaign focuses on investing $150 million cut from military spending and reinvesting it toward emergency assistance to America's towns and cities, federal assistance for school districts, social security supplements, and stepped up environmental protection.

Although Agran had about a 20 percent rate of recognition in a poll conducted by USA Today last week, he said he is attempting to increase his recognition.

A visit to the campus is "a possibility," Agran said, but "there just hasn't been the kind of [output] in support in Ohio."

Friedman said his brother-in-law will have a definite effect on the presidential race.

"A race for the Democratic nomination is a lot healthier if at least one candidate is totally committed to issues, as opposed to his or her personal well-being," Friedman said.

Tinker said he hopes voters who are still trying to decide who to vote for for mayor will take into consideration that Agran talked to Tinker, heard about his campaign, and liked what he heard.

"It may encourage them to think more. Everyone has to make a decision for themselves," he said.

PEACE

Once accepted into the Corps, volunteers work for 27 months.

"The length of training ranges from five or six weeks to three months, depending on the country you are going to and the area in which you are studying," Gilbert said.

The Peace Corps will give these volunteers extensive training in language, cultural and technical areas.

"We don't send people to foreign countries ignorant," Gilbert said. "We want them to help people and understand them."

The volunteers who are in the Peace Corps are not really volunteers because they do get paid for their work.

"They are paid twice a month in the currency of the country they are in, and the amount equivalent to the profession in which they work," Gilbert said. "Also, they receive $200 in American currency each month that they receive at the end of their 27-month period."

Volunteers also receive free medical and dental care, and their travel expenses to and from their country are paid by the Peace Corps.

Once a person has completed his or her service, the experience they have received continues to be beneficial to them, Gilbert said.

"Many schools provide a great deal of financial aid and scholarships to those that have been a Peace Corps volunteer," he said. "Also, student loans for Peace Corps volunteers are reduced 50 percent for four years of service."

Many places of business value

a person who has been a volunteer because they have proven that they are able to adapt to an unfamiliar situation and survive, Gilbert said.

"These volunteers have completed the job they set out to do under very trying circumstances, and have work experience," he said.

The Michigan/Ohio office will be visiting Bowling Green on Oct. 7 to inform people of what the Peace Corps does.

"Volunteers are needed because we are now going into the Baltics and the Ukrainian territories," Gilbert said. "There is also a discussion about going into Russia itself."

Peace Corps representatives will be in the Student Union all day on Oct. 7, and a film depicting the lives of three volunteers will be shown at noon and 7 p.m.

Falcon cross country remains undefeated

by Matt Kantz
sports writer

The men's cross country team finished its dual meet season undefeated at 6-0 over the weekend with a 26-31 victory over Miami. The women, however, dropped to 1-3 in the Mid-American Conference with a 19-40 loss to the Redskins.

In their first and only 10,000 meter meet before the MAC Championships, the Falcons' depth once again gave them the victory. Eddie Nicholson's fifth-place finish, along with Shawn Howard and Dane Schubert finishing seventh and eighth, helped lead BG to victory.

Keith Madaras paced the Falcons with a second-place finish in a time of 32:06 and Todd Black finished fourth in a time of 32:19. Freshmen Scott Kelly (33:08) and Brad Schaser (33:32) finished 10th and 11th respectively.

"It was a very good race," head coach Sid Sink said. "We won again with depth. We've had more depth and have been putting our seventh guy in front of their fifth. We did the same thing against Ohio University and Kent.

"I think this meet showed we could run a good 10,000 meters.

Fred Keiser of Miami finished first in the race with a time of 32:00, outkicking Madaras for the victory. The Redskins' third-place finisher led most of the race before dropping off at the end.

The Falcons, now 4-0 in the MAC, begin invitational action next weekend when they travel to the Notre Dame Invitational before the All-Ohio meet the following week.

"We're very happy beating Miami, especially in the 10,000 meters," Sink said. "Now the big ones start."

Despite losing big on the scoreboard, head coach Steve Price said he is happy with this weekend's meet.

"The girls ran well and many improved over last year's time," Price said. "We ran against perhaps the best team in the conference."

BG's Cheri Triner led the Falcons with third-place finish in a time of 18:29. Jill Strauser (18:45) finished sixth and Andrea Rombes (19:03) finished eighth for the Falcons, who fall to 3-3 overall.

Strauser knocked 35 seconds off her time and Rombes ran nearly 25 seconds better, which is what Price is looking for.

"I have to be happy with the improvement," Price said. "I think if we continue training as hard as we are, we will be in the top three teams in the MAC meet."

The women will travel to Chicago next weekend for the Lakefront Invitational.

"We will be against a large number of teams at the Lakefront Invitational," Price said. "It will be a very tough meet and we hope to be in the top four of the teams competing."

Falcons lose first conference match

by Mike Slates
sports writer

The volleyball team lost its first Mid-American Conference match to Western Michigan Friday night, but regained its form Sunday afternoon to defeat Southern Illinois.

The Broncos needed only three games to dispose of the Falcons, winning 15-12, 15-8, 15-10. BG suffered through its worst hitting percentage of the year, an .062 mark. Senior middle hitter Lisa Mika led all Falcon attackers with a .133 hitting percentage and added 19 kills.

"The Western Michigan match was very frustrating," said the volleyball team's head coach Denise Van De Walle. "We did not get any breaks and there were times when I felt the officiating really hurt us."

On Sunday, though, the volleyball team returned to its winning ways by besting Southern Illinois, a non-conference team. The Falcons survived through four tough games to defeat their opponents, 15-13, 7-15, 15-9, 15-11. The Salukis' record fell to 8-9.

The Falcons improved their hitting percentage from Friday night's loss to a .234 mark. Junior setter Carey Amos once again led the team in assists with 59 and contributed six blocks to the cause. Senior middle hitter Tammy Schiller and Mika each registered 17 kills.

After taking the first game, BG seemed to be caught flat-footed in the second. Southern Illinois jumped out to a 12-2 lead and never looked back.

"The Salukis played good defense and came at us very strong at the net offensively," Van De Walle said. "Our passing broke down and we just could not get any rhythm going."

In the third game, junior left-side/middle hitter Angellette Love was inserted into the lineup to provide some extra help. Although she responded by totalling nine kills and 12 digs in the final two games, the Falcons still had problems putting away their opponents.

Leading 14-8 in the third, BG did not receive its final point of the game until the entire rotation had served once. The Falcons squandered a 10-2 lead in the fourth game to hang on at the end.

"We got a couple breaks at the end of both games," said Van De Walle. "A break here or there is very critical in volleyball."

The Falcons, now 8-2 and 2-1 in the MAC, travel to Chicago, Illinois to compete in the DePaul Revlon Invitational October 4 and 5. North Carolina, Western Illinois, and host DePaul make up the four-team tournament. The Blue Demons, 0-2 against the MAC, are 11-4 overall while the Tar Heels are 7-7 and the Westwinds have a 7-4 record.

BG does not play another MAC foe until October 11 and 12. The Falcons will host the Golden Flashes of Kent State and the Ohio Bobcats on that weekend.

Soccer is still unbeaten

by Bob E. Lewis
sports writer

It was a weekend of wins for the soccer team as they defeated both Marquette and DePaul 1-0 to continue their unbeaten streak to nine games with a record of 8-0-1.

"The weekend was very positive for our team," coach Gary Palmisano said. "We showed a lot of maturity, were very poised, overcame many obstacles, and most importantly, the team believed in themselves."

In the triumph against Marquette on Saturday, the Falcons overcame bad field conditions and a complete soccer team.

"It was an evenly played game, but the playing surface was not conducive for attractive soccer," Palmisano said. "Marquette had all the ingredients—good size, strength, and speed."

The team's lone goal came with 33 seconds left in the second ten minute overtime. All three team captains contributed to the winning goal. "Martella came forward through the midfield and passed the ball to (Chris) Iantoni, who penetrated the flank and crossed it near post where Chris Williams headed it into the net," Palmisano said.

The Falcons had a scare in the first overtime period when a Marquette player served the ball from the midfield to the far post, on goalkeeper Greg Murphy's left, where a forward headed the ball shoulder-height to Murphy's right.

CULTURAL

The class of 1995, the first to enter the University under the new requirement, is expressing mixed reactions. Some students said they support the introduction of more information on minorities into college courses but resent having to take the mandatory courses.

"There is only so much you can learn in a class," said Jenny Mathe, a political science major. "It's not the right approach."

Mathe is filling her cultural diversity requirement with Ethnicity in America, an honors course. She recommended more extracurricular multicultural programming as an alternative to course requirements.

Other students agreed intercultural programs on campus would do more to further ethnic understanding than the required courses. Some say general ethnic studies courses simply describe old stereotypes instead of breaking them down.

"It's all stereotypes ... stuff you know already," environmental policy major Jennifer Fantuz said. "The time could be better spent learning something I don't know."

Faculty members said an inability to relate to the issues discussed may be part of the problem.

"Among, say, African-Americans, there's a hunger to know the history that has been denied them," said 19th Century Slave Culture instructor Jon Spencer. "I suppose many white students don't have an interest because it doesn't relate to them."

"But then, not taking a course ... is a great way to maintain that denial."

Not all students see the courses as inadequate. Freshman Lacre-sha Laresque, an Introduction to Black Studies student, said the cultural diversity requirement is needed because everyone needs an understanding of black culture.

Instructor opinion seems divided over future implementation of ethnic studies in other courses.

"I don't think Bowling Green has the will to take [implementation] as far as it should go," Black Studies Professor Charles Muhammad said. "But it does have the responsibility to establish a minority curriculum."

"No one wants this requirement," said history Professor Lillian Ashcraft-Eason. "Fusing this information into other courses ... that's the ultimate goal."

SOCCER

Fortunately for BG, Murphy made a "great reaction save" to reserve the Falcons right to continue playing.

"It was an outstanding team victory in that we showed a good deal of mental toughness, and we played with confidence and composure," Palmisano said.

After the win in Milwaukee, the team traveled to Chicago to secure their second weekend victory against a "fresh" DePaul team.

"It was our third game in five days and fatigue was beginning to set in," Palmisano said. "They were hoping to capitalize on this by wearing us out so they could score."

But that never happened as forward Ken Sorenson got the game's only tally with 7:38 left to play in regulation. It was Sorenson's second game winning goal in the last three contests.

"Because of Bob Boyle's injury, Ken has started the last three games for us," Palmisano said. "He has been very consistent and impressive."

DePaul played a defensive game where the entire team would retreat and clog up BG's entire attacking part of the field.

PLACEMENT SCHEDULE

BOWLING GREEN STATE UNIVERSITY
UNIVERSITY PLACEMENT SERVICES
Campus Recruitment Calendar #2

For The Weeks of:
October 14 and October 21, 1991

Scheduling On-Campus
Interview Appointments:

The first day of sign-ups for interviews during the period of October 14 through October 25, 1991 will be held in the Lenhart Grand Ballroom on Wednesday, October 2nd. For registrants with an Advanced Job Hunters Interview Card sign-ups begin at 3:00 pm; for those with a First Choice Interview Card sign-ups begin at 4:00 pm. All registrants must have a First Choice Interview Card or Advanced Job Hunter Card to participate in the first day of sign-up. After the first day, students and Alumni may sign-up for interviews from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the University Placement Services, 360 Student Services Building. A Data Sheet MUST be submitted for each interview scheduled at the time of sign-up.

Cancellation of Interview Appointments: Cancellation of an interview must be reported in person to the University Placement Services no later than 5 p.m. one week (7 full days) before the interview day. Complete a cancellation card in the Sign-Up Room of the Placement Office. Cancellations after this time will be considered a no-show. You are encouraged to carefully consider employers before signing up for interviews.

No Show Policy: Failure to appear for a scheduled interview or violation of the cancellation policy will result in immediate suspension of your sign-up privileges for the next recruiting period. If you did not honor your scheduled interview, you are required to write a letter of apology to the employer for missing the interview, bring the letter with an addressed, stamped envelope, and meet with a Placement Counselor before scheduling any additional interviews. Any student who "no-shows" twice will be denied interviewing privileges for the remainder of the academic year.

Notice on Citizenship Requirements: An asterisk (*) following an organizational name denotes specific requirements regarding work status in the United States. Please review these requirements carefully. Only those organizations with an asterisk (*) will interview candidates with a student visa. Students who do not meet the work status requirements are encouraged to sign-up on the waiting list.

Spotlight Presentations: Spotlight presentations offer valuable information about career paths, detailed position responsibilities and organizational philosophy. All students scheduling interviews are strongly encouraged to attend appropriate Spotlights. Please carefully note dates, times, and locations of Spotlight presentations, as they may vary. For evening Spotlight presentations held in the Placement Office, enter the Student Services Building using the second floor, patio entrance. Please consult the calendar for appropriate dates, times and locations.

Additional Placement Services: There are important services available to you at the University Placement Services. Please note that not all organizations and companies regularly recruit on college campuses. The list below generally reflects the high demand areas in the world of work. Don't become discouraged if your career field is not requested. To assist you in conducting an assertive job search, the University Placement Services provides career and placement counseling, credential services, job search workshops, professional development seminars, career fairs and an alumni Falcon Career Connection. The excellent Center for Career Resources offers you career and employer information and current job vacancies in ALL career fields. During the Fall Semester the Center for Career Resources will be open until 8:00 p.m. Monday through Wednesday. Placement Counselors directly refer registered students to employers in their desired career fields. Insure your access to these services by registering with the University Placement Services in your final year at Bowling Green State University.

LOOK, GUYS! ALL WE HAD TO DO WAS GET A NAME, IS THAT SO DIFFICULT?

WELL, JAY, NAMING A NEW GROUP IS LIKE A VERY HARD THING TO DO...

[MUTTER] SO FAR WE'VE REJECTED TWO NAMES...

I STILL DON'T SEE WHAT'S WRONG WITH "PHILIP"...

YOU MEAN, BESIDES THAT IT'S DERIVATIVE OF "PHILIP"...

UH, YES, CAN WE JUST LET THAT ONE DIE? PLEASE?

AND WHAT'S WRONG WITH "PHILIP"...

COME ON, PEOPLE! WE'VE GOT TO BE SERIOUS! WE'VE GOT TO BE SERIOUS!

LET ME KNOW WHEN YOU'VE DECIDED ON A NAME, AND WE'LL BE SERIOUS!

LOOK, JUST BECAUSE YOU WANTED TO BE SERIOUS, IT DOESN'T MEAN YOU'VE GOT TO BE SERIOUS!

MY FRIEND, YOU TEMPT ME TO BE SERIOUS!

HUNDREDS OF HOMELESS PEOPLE IN THE UNITED STATES DON'T HAVE ADEQUATE CLOTHES AND WILL FREEZE TO DEATH THIS WINTER.

WE MOM, COULD YOU MAIL ME MY OLD WINTER COAT?

WHY? WHAT HAPPENED TO THE NEW JACKET I JUST BOUGHT YOU?

WELL, LAM, LET'S JUST SAY I'M LETTING A FRIEND BORROW IT.
